

People of Position (Classic Reprint)

Stanley Portal Hyatt

Excerpt from People of Position Grierson refilled the magazine of his rifle carefully - when you are dealing with South American patriots it is better to take no chances, even though the enemy has retreated - then he wiped a couple of half-dried blood spots off his cheek, and, after that, went over to where lay the body of the man from whom that same blood had spurted. For a full minute he stood very still, gazing with sombre eyes at the kindly face which seemed to be smiling back at him even in death then he knelt down, and, with infinite gentleness, smoothed the ruffled hair, arranged the collar so as to hide the bullet hole in the bronzed throat, and crossed the hands on the breast. When he got up again his face was twitching strangely, seeing which, the American officer, who had come up behind him, suddenly became busy with his men.
