Not illustrated. 1890 Excerpt: ...and we read the study and reap the benefit and profit by the fruits of his results, we are convinced that we are growing strong in the stay of disease, and while we are loath but convinced that antiseptics is against the practitioner, we are waiting until we can gain and wield the same rules and have like help as found in the model institutions of our land. The end of this is a system of laws yet in its crude state, combining much yet neglected and discarding, much that is held fast at the present time, which will be issued in a complex form, demanding years of study to formulate with a key that our patient cannot understand. And while the practitioner is cognizant of these principles, he is unable to apply them, for reasons given above. We commend to your special notice the Monthly. They will be found the original articles in this number of both entertaining and instructive. FOREIGN BODIES IN THE LARYNX. BY F. E. WAXHAM, M. D., CHICAGO, II, !.. Read before the Chicago Medical Society. The literature of foreign bodies in observation, a shawl-pin was the larynx is somewhat meager most writers treating of foreign bodies in the air passages, the pharynx, trachea and bronchi, as well as the larynx. Many cases have been reported, however, where foreign bodies of various kinds have found lodgment in the larynx. These have been of the most varied character, including food of all kinds, masses of meat, fragments of bone, small pebbles, shells, kernels of corn, beans, coins, buttons, artificial teeth, pins, and the like. Leeches have been known to enter the larynx from carelessness in applying them in the mouth, and again necrosis of the cartilages of the larynx has occurred portions have become detached and lodged in the glottis, causing suffocation. The epiglotti..
